PREFACE.

THE present essay is divided into three parts. The first part is introductory; in it is given miscellaneous information respecting the printer Jan van Doesborgh and his productions. The second part consists of a bibliography, in which the books are arranged in an order as nearly as possible chronological. The third part contains three sections: the first is a list of the woodcuts used in those of the books which I have been able to examine; the second section is devoted to the woodcut borders; and the third to the woodcut or metal initials and various minor ornaments used in the same books.

For never-failing help, advice, and encouragement I am deeply indebted to Mr. E. Gordon Duff. My best thanks are due to Mr. Christie Miller and Mr. R. E. Graves for opportunity to examine at my leisure the books in the library at Britwell; to Mr. A. H. Huth, for permission to reproduce Plate II.; to Mr. C. H. Coote for valuable assistance in Nos. 3, 4, and 22; and to the Librarian of the University of Cambridge. I have also to express my most sincere gratitude to Professor Henri Logeman, of Ghent, for most kind and generous help.

PART I.
INTRODUCTORY.

INTRODUCTORY.

FEW periods in the history of printing have been so much neglected, in proportion to their merits, as the years immediately succeeding those in which the new art obtained a hold on the peoples of Europe. In strong contrast with the attention paid to the productions of the printing-press in the fifteenth century, the typographical history of the early years of the sixteenth century is, with the exception of one or two exceptionally famous presses, to all practical purposes a closed book to the student. This is the more striking in the case of the Netherlands, because, while the fifteenth-century press in that country has been treated with far greater thoroughness than elsewhere in the works of Holtrop, Campbell, Conway, and Bradshaw, no bibliographer has yet attempted to do for the presses of the Low Countries in the beginning of the sixteenth century what the Repertorium of Weller and the Deutsche Annalen of Panzer have done for those of Germany. Van Iseghem's work on Thierry Martens, a book now considerably out of date, is still the only bibliography of this period of any note. To an English reader the interest of the period chiefly centres in Antwerp, a town which, though it received the art of printing late, rose rapidly to a foremost position as a typographical centre. This was mainly due to the enterprise of Gheraert Leeu, who moved from Gouda in 1484, and, till his death in 1493, displayed extraordinary energy and enterprise.

It was doubtless the importance of the English trade at Antwerp that suggested to him the production of books for the English market, and his influence, probably to some extent, determined the character of the numerous English books which issued from Antwerp presses after his death. The Rudimenta of Perottus, printed by Aegidius van der Heerstraten at Louvain about the year 1487, is indeed an earlier example of a book intended for English use, but to Leeu must be given the credit of having organized this branch of the book trade in any effective manner. The demand for popular literature was what Leeu and his successors attempted to satisfy, and we find accordingly that the English books printed by them are almost entirely confined to the four classes of romances, grammars, almanacks, and service-books, almost all small and therefore cheap, and either suited to the popular tastes, or certain of a large sale because universally used as school-books. Later, however, the influence of the Reformation caused a complete change, and we find that, from about 1530 down to the end of the century, the English presses of Antwerp were monopolized in turn by exiled theologians of the religious party which happened to be out of favour at the particular time.

Among those who may have inherited Leeu's traditions and practice with regard to English trade, Jan van Doesborgh is by far the most important figure. The only attempt at a collection of what is known about him is the Note by Prof. Arber, which is prefixed to his reprint of the New Lands entitled The first three English books on America [1885; p. xxv].¹ This, while not professing to be more than an opening of the subject, is very useful as a guide to further investigation, and I am very largely indebted to it.

Of Jan van Doesborgh's life we know but little, and that little is to a large extent quite impersonal. His native town, Doesborgh, is a small place not far from Arnhem, at the junction of the Oude and Nieuwe Ijssel. Its sole appearance in history is in the year 1585,

when it was sacked by the Spanish troops. Jan van Doesborgh, like so many of the Dutch and Belgian printers, seems never to have made use of his true surname. The books which are at present the earliest known productions of his press shew us that he succeeded to the business of Roelant van den Dorpe, the printer of the Brabant Chronicle of 1497, who died in 1500. His widow carried on the business for some, but seemingly only a short, time, for no books are known printed by her after 1501; but at some time previous to 1508 we find the devices used by R. van den Dorpe and his widow in Jan van Doesborgh's possession, as well as his type and (at a later period) his woodcuts. R. van den Dorpe lived in 1497 "in die huyvetters strate, bi onser vrouwen broeders." But a later book, the Seer minnelijcke woerden, is dated from the Iron Balance, "aen dijseren waghe." For these see Campbell's Annales, Nos. 508, 1785. It was from the Iron Balance that the books printed by R. van den Dorpe's widow were issued, and the name reappears in the colophons of several of J. van Doesborgh's books. Although it is nowhere expressly stated, there can be little doubt that this same house is meant in other colophons in which J. van Doesborgh's shop is said to be "by the Cammerpoorte." This position, both inside and outside the gate, was the central one for the printers of that period. Govaert Back's "Vogelhuis" was "near the Cammerpoorte" [colophon to the Herbarius of 1511; Van der Meersch, Recherches, etc., Gand, 1856, p. 126], Henrik Eckert lived "bi der Cammerpoerten int huys van Delft" [Hain 12010], Henrik de Lettersnider, who left Antwerp for Delft in 1500, lived in the Cammerstraet, next door to the Golden Unicorn, where Liesvelt and afterwards Vorsterman lived, "buyten die Cammerpoorte" [Campbell, Annales, Nos. 1026, 549^A]. From December 1521 onwards J. van Doesborgh lived "op die Lombaerde veste, inden aren van die vier evangelisten." That the Lombaerde veste was not far from the Cammerpoorte is shown by the colophon to the Ouder vader collatie printed by Mich. Hillen in 1506 "bi der Camer poorte op die Lombaerde veste" [see No. 3 of the J. Kockx sale catalogue, Antw. 1891]. A plan of Antwerp, such as that in Baedeker's Belgium and Holland, shews the Cammerstraet, or Rue des Peignes, running in a south-easterly direction from near the Place Verte, as a continuation of the Vieux Marché aux Blés. The Rempart du Lombard (Lombaerde Veste) is a turning out of this street, and runs north-eastwards behind the Post Office, parallel to the Marché aux Souliers. An old plan (that by P. Verbiest, Antwerpia: constructionis eius primordia et incrementa, c. 1665, or that by Harrewyn, Brussels, 1733) indicates the Cammerpoorte at the point where the Cammerstraet crossed the old moat or ditch of the enceinte, close to the corner of the Lombaerde Veste. The Cammerstraet continued outside the gate for a considerable distance in a straight line under the same name.

In the year 1508, the very year in which J. van Doesborgh issued his first dated book, the Reyse van Lissebone, we find a record of his admission as "vrijmeester" of the Sint-Lucas-gilde [De Liggeren . . . der Antwerpsche Sint Lucasgilde, afgeschr. van P. Rombouts en T. van Lerijs, part i., p. 69]; he is there described as "verlichtere" or illuminator, a profession which may possibly in some degree account for the profuse way in which most of his books are illustrated with woodcuts. This description was thought by Dr. Campbell [Arber, Note] to show that he was not at that time a printer. This does not seem conclusive, as during the early years of typography many printers combined other occupations with the practice of their art; and it is on the whole improbable that he would have succeeded to R. van den Dorpe's business so long a time as seven years after his widow ceased working his press. However, such cases are not entirely unknown, and the relations between William of Malines and Richard Pynson form an instance in point. But we have positive evidence that Dr. Campbell's hypothesis is untenable in the fact that, as will be shown later, three at least of the extant productions of J. van Doesborgh must be assigned to a date earlier than that of the Reyse van Lissebone.

Of J. van Doesborgh's connection with other printers than R. van den Dorpe we know very little. In the Wonderful Shape an initial is used which once belonged to Leeu, but otherwise Henrik Eckert is the chief of those with whom we find him in touch. Not only were the Chronicle set of cuts used by Eckert in his edition of 1512, the new cuts found in that edition being subsequently used with the original set by J. van Doesborgh, but the cut of S. Augustine used in the *Dieren Palley*s had previously passed through Eckert's hands. Between Vorsterman and our printer the relations may have been less friendly; the Dutch edition of Virgilius printed by Vorsterman is illustrated with copies of the cuts in the English edition, so that it would seem as if the use of the original cuts had not been granted him. We also find Claes de Grave copying a cut of J. van Doesborgh's in the year 1517, but he also, according to Mr. W. M. Conway (Woodcutters of the Netherlands, p. 314) used single cuts of the Chronicle set in 1517 and 1527, the latter of these dates being an error for 1520 (June 27). No. 29 of Mr. Conway's list, for instance, is found on the title of the 1520 book, the Somme ruyrael of J. Boutillier. In 1531, according to the same authority, some cuts of the same Chronicle set appear in a book printed by Vorsterman; and some small ornaments used in Vorsterman's Dutch Virgilius are found in the Cronike van Brabant printed by J. van Doesborgh in 1530. This same Chronicle was printed for Michiel Hillen, J. van Doesborgh's neighbour, and at least one, probably more than one, of the cuts therein used belonged to Hillen in 1520.

In no sense can J. van Doesborgh be called a printer careful in the selection or use of his materials. He borrowed right and left, of his neighbours in Antwerp, of France, and probably of Germany: indeed it is in very few cases possible to say positively of any cuts used by him that they were made for the actual position they occupy. It is very probable that the majority of those in the books numbered in Part II. Nos. 2, 3, 4, 18, and 26 to 28, were so made, but in most other cases it is certain that the contrary is the truth. Our printer was quite content to illustrate a mention of a ship in the text with a cut of Jonah and the whale, or to use in the *Dieren Palley*s the same illustration, sometimes sideways or upside down for variety, for several different animals. In this point, however, it must be confessed that he differs little from his contemporaries.

It next falls to speak of J. van Doesborgh's connection with Laurence Andrewe of Calais, who was in and after 1527 a printer and bookseller at London. It is established by two books, the first of which is that entitled The wonderful shape and nature of man, a compilation translated at Antwerp by Andrewe to be printed by 'Johnes doesborowe booke printer' and 'never in no maternall langage prentyd tyl now.' There is no date to this book, but it is (in spite of the statement just quoted) later than the Dutch original (the *Dieren palley*s), which was printed in 1520. The second book is the Valuation of gold and silver, 'printed in the city of Antwerp for Laurence Andrewe,' cited by Herbert [Typographical Antiquities, p. 412], who, followed by Berjeau [Bibliophile illustré, No. 1 (Aug., 1861), p. 5], held that Andrewe was an apprentice of J. van Doesborgh. There is nothing to confirm this conjecture in the books printed at a later time by Andrewe himself, which show no trace of J. van Doesborgh's influence, but on the contrary resemble closely the productions of English printers of that period, such as Peter Treveris or John Rastell. The wording in the Wonderful Shape does not in any way imply the dependence of Andrewe.

This book was translated by Andrewe; but who was responsible for the other English books of this press? We know from Wyer's edition of The four tokens that J. van Doesborgh was himself the translator; it was 'translated out of Duche into Englysshe by John Dousbrugh.' In the edition printed by J. van Doesborgh himself the Four tokens precede the Fifteen tokens, which tract is stated in the book to be translated from the French. It is in fact taken from the second part of L'art de bien mourir. Probably the English version is not taken directly from the French, but is a translation of the Dutch text printed in the Oorspronck of 1517. The translation does little credit to our printer, if indeed the whole book is to be assigned to him: he displays a woful ignorance of English, inserting purely Dutch words in a haphazard fashion. This is also true of the New Lands, as was pointed out by Prof. Arber, but it is not generally true of the English books.

Douce, in a manuscript note prefixed to his copy of the Parson of Kalenborowe, asserts very positively that in all probability Richard Arnold was the translator of most of them; but he does not say on what evidence he grounds the assertion; it may be a mere conjecture.

The last book printed by J. van Doesborgh with a date is the Cronike van Brabant of June 1530, to be sold by M. Hillen. After this no certain information concerning him is available, though the name of "Jan van Doesborch" occurs as a printer or bookseller at Utrecht about the year 1540 [Ledeboer, Lijst der boekdrukkers . . . in Noord-Nederland, Utrecht, 1876; p. 46], and this may possibly shew that he removed to Utrecht at some period after 1530.

It will be seen from the foregoing that we know very little of our printer's life between the bounding dates of 1508 and 1530 or 1540, and nothing outside those dates. No doubt much more will eventually be learned respecting him and his contemporaries, many of whom are to an equal or even to a greater degree mere names to us at present.

The types used by Jan van Doesborgh are only two in number. The first type, which he employed almost exclusively, is that which with little variation was used by Jacobus de Breda, Henrik de Lettersnider, R. van den Dorpe, and Henrik Eckert in the fifteenth, and by almost every printer in the Netherlands in the sixteenth century. The second type, a smaller one, is used only as supplementary to the other, and only in two books, the undated Os facies mentum and the Oorspronck of 1517. The large letters sometimes found on the title-pages are without exception cut on wooden blocks. This was a common practice with Eckert, Vorsterman, and other printers of that period in the Low Countries.

In the printer's marks or devices found in J. van Doesborgh's books there are five stages, which follow an obvious order of sequence.

Device 1, which is found only in the Fifteen tokens, consists of the cut used by R. van den Dorpe as his mark. In its original state (as figured in Holtrop's Monuments, pl. 111 [72]) this cut represents the knight Roland facing the right and winding his horn. From branches which arch overhead hang two shields, one on either side: that on the left bears the arms of Antwerp, that on the right bears an axe, the printer's own cognisance. Below a label gives his name as "Van den dorpe." Before being used by J. van Doesborgh the cut was altered; the name was erased from the label, and the axe from the right hand shield, not so completely, however, but that a vestige of both handle and blade is discernible.

Device 2, which is, like Device 1, only known to have been used by J. van Doesborgh in a single book, the Van Pape Jans landendes, first appears in the Spiegel der volcomenheit printed by R. van den Dorpe's widow in 1501; it is reproduced by Van der Meersch [Recherches, etc., p. 130]. It differs from Device 1 in being smaller and less artistic; the label, which is blank, is in the upper part of the field, and the shields, which have changed sides, rest on the ground. The axe was cut out of the left hand shield before the device was used by J. van Doesborgh.

Not long, as it would seem, after employing Device 2, our printer adopted a motto of his own, which appears after the colophon of Van der nieuwer werelt as "e celo descendit ꝑbum quod gnothochyauton," a curiously incorrect quotation from Juvenal xi. 27. It is possible that this use of a motto was only a stop-gap used while Device 3 was being cut.

Device 3 is a very remarkable one. It appears in its complete state [3^A] in two books only, the Reyse van Lissebone and the Longer Accidence. In a chamber with tiled floor sits a woman on a throne with two steps and a canopy. Over her head is her name 'Auontuere;'; in her right hand she holds a sceptre, in her left hand the wheel of fortune. The left side of her face is masked, and a bandage covers her eyes. On her right a man labelled 'gheluck' stands blowing a long hornlike instrument. On her left a similar man called 'ongeluc' blows a smaller instrument of the same kind. Below is an inscription, which reads ΓΝΟΘΟΧΥΑΥΤΟΝ, in which may be recognized the 'gnothochyauton' of the motto in Van der nieuwer werelt. The scheme of this device is perhaps derived from a cut used by R. van den Dorpe in the book entitled Van nijeuwont, loosheit, ende practike [Campbell, Annales, No. 1705]. It is thus described by Conway [Woodcutters, p. 317]: 'A woman (New Invention) seated between her two lawyers (Practice and Cunning).' In any case the device is an admirable one for a printer in a great commercial city, who printed for a market oversea.

Not long after being cut Device 3 appears to have met with an accident, for with the exception of the two books mentioned above, it is in no case found complete, the side edges in the lower part, where the inscription is, being broken away, one side wholly, and the other partially. I call the device in this state 3ⁿ. The first dated book in which it is found in this state is the Oorspronck of 1517, and it is last used in the Tdal sonder wederkeeren of July, 1528. In English books it is usually associated with the arms of England.

It is next necessary to determine the chronological order of the productions of J. van Doesborgh. Only eleven of these have a distinct printed date; accordingly that of the large majority has to be ascertained otherwise. Two other books contain indications in the text which enable their position to be fixed with sufficient precision. The thirteen books thus obtained are the following:

Dec., 1508.	Reyse van Lissebone.
(Not after 1516).	Prognostication for 1516.
May, 1517.	Oorspronck.
1517.	Causes that be proponed.
(After Jan., 1517).	Letter of B. de Clereville.
1518.	Cronike van Brabant.
1518.	Merchant's wife.
5 May, 1520.	Dieren palley.
8 Nov., 1521.	Van Jason ende Hercules.
12 Dec., 1521.	Die historie van Hercules.
25 June, 1528.	Der IX. Quaesten.
10 July, 1528.	Tdal sonder wederkeeren.
June, 1530.	Cronike van Brabant.

It is noticeable that only four of all these are in English, and that, except the first and the last three, all fall within a period of six years. It will be seen hereafter that, although some of the undated books can be grouped round that dated 1508, and others must be distributed through the two great gaps, yet this period of five years contains a far larger number of books in proportion than any other. It is therefore necessary to assume a great increase of activity at this period from some cause, or an immense destruction of works produced in the other periods of our printer's career. Both may be partly true, but the second cause is probably the more important one.

In endeavouring to fix the dates or chronological sequence of undated books, the main standards of comparison are, speaking generally, two: the types and the illustrations, including devices. In the present case the former fails us; the type remains the same throughout, and any difference in it which is observable is to be attributed rather to variation in presswork than to any traceable progressive wear of the type. It is therefore necessary to depend on the second standard of comparison, the illustrations: and happily in most cases they are of great help. In the first place, the devices give some aid; though, except in the relations between 3^A and 3^B, confirmation from other considerations is necessary to determine the order in which they are placed: otherwise there would be no evidence, other than a priori probability, for the precedence in time of the two Van den Dorpe devices. The illustrations, however, shew that the order here assigned to them is the right one. The following is a list of the books which contain devices:

Device 1.	The fifteen Tokens, n.d.
Device 2.	Van pape Jans landendes, n.d.
Motto of Device 3.	Van der neuer werelt, n.d.
Device 3 ^A .	Reyse van Lissebone, 1508.
	Long Accidence, n.d.

Device 3^B.

Oorspronck, 1517.

Frederick of Jennen, 1518.

Dieren Palleys, 1520.

Der IX quaestén, 1528.

Tdal sonder wederkeeren, 1528.

Mary of Nemmegen, n.d.

The new lands, n.d.

Virgilius, n.d.

In this list we have before us the three books which in all probability precede the Reyse of 1508, the first book with a date.

Turning to the other illustrations, the wood-cut borders used so lavishly by J. van Doesborgh afford valuable assistance, not only by a comparison of their condition in various books, but also by other indications. For instance, the borders in the Fifteen Tokens are quite distinct from those found in any other book, except that one or two occur in Van pape Jans Landendes. A group of books distinguished by the absence of borders comes next. The book last mentioned belongs to this group, though it still contains a few. With the publication of the Oorspronck in 1517 a new period is reached, which lasts to the end of the printer's career. This is marked by a very free use of a large number of borders, none of which are identical with those found in the Fifteen Tokens. A reference to the short list prefixed to Part II., and a comparison with the list of borders in Part III., will shew that the books in which no borders are found (Nos. 3, sqq.) occupy a position intermediate between the Fifteen Tokens and the Oorspronck, while the transitional book, No. 2, takes its proper place in the scheme. Thus the order assigned to the earliest books by the device is to some degree confirmed. The evidence afforded by the illustrations proper comes next in order. As this is detailed in Part III., it is only necessary here to state briefly the results obtained.

By the cuts common to both, the Fifteen Tokens is shewn to precede the Oorspronck of 1517. By the borders it is earlier than Van pape Jans landendes. The cuts shew that both this last and Van der nieuwer werelt precede the Reyse of 1508. Thus the a priori evidence of the devices is confirmed. The Long Accidence is connected with the Reyse by the device; the Short Accidence has the same initial letter as the Fifteen Tokens. The Os facies mentum has a cut which is found in the Fifteen Tokens; its wood-cut title and its use of Type 2 link it to the Oorspronck group.

Turning to this middle group (1516-1521), Borders 18-20 prove Virgilius to be earlier than the *Dieren Palley*s of 1520, while the cut common to both shews it to be later than the Oorspronck; Borders 18, 21, and one cut make it earlier than Frederick of Jennen; but it is impossible to decide whether Frederick or Mary of Nemmegen is the earlier. Several borders establish the priority of the Letter of B. de Clereville [after Jan., 1517] to any of these three. The cuts common to the New Lands and to the *Dieren Palley*s seem to prove the former to be the later, though Border 20 appears to tell the other way. In this connection Border 23 is also noticeable. The Wonderful Shape is undoubtedly later than the *Dieren Palley*s; the *Huys der fortune*n must be placed earlier, as some of its cuts and the type belonging to them are found in the *Dieren Palley*s. The fragment of Howleglas belongs to the Virgilius group.

In this way the number of books without an approximately determined place in the chronological order has been materially reduced. Of those which remain the places assigned are for the most part conjectural. The Destruētie van Troyen and some others I have not been able to see: Euryalus and Lucretia is not large enough, in the only fragment at present known, to give any clue. Robin Hood is placed where it is, because the scarcity of cuts and absence of borders suggest that it belongs to the early period; the date of the tracts with which it is bound (1508) points to the same conclusion. Nothing has yet been said of the Parson of Kalenborowe. It is an extremely puzzling book: none of its borders are found elsewhere, and only one of its cuts, which appears in Frederick of Jennen. Its general appearance, however, has induced me to place it near the end.

After the rest come three books which are very doubtful. The first may with more or less probability be assigned to J. van Doesborgh. No trustworthy information concerning the other two is forthcoming.

In conclusion, it is necessary to mention the reasons which have led me to exclude the so-called Arnold's Chronicle, which is usually attributed to J. van Doesborgh. There can be little doubt that the attribution is an error. In the first place the date is very suspicious. The last events mentioned in the text are the death of Prince Arthur (12 April, 1502) and the election of sheriffs for the year 19 Henry VII. It is not likely, therefore, that it was printed later than 1503; but the Oorspronck of 1517 is the earliest dated folio printed by J. van Doesborgh.

Secondly, the style of printing is different from what we know of J. van Doesborgh's method. The identity of the large type proves nothing, as it is universal: the difference of the small type used in the marginalia from that used by J. van Doesborgh is a strong argument. The three-line and larger initials are in no case identical with any found in books by our printer, although the smaller initials seem in some instances to correspond with those in the Fifteen Tokens. Leaf-numbering, again, is found in this book, never in any of J. van Doesborgh's productions, and the presence of several eights in the signatures differs from his practice of making up his folio books in fours and sixes only. Marginalia are here used, but never in any book printed by J. van Doesborgh. The small type used for these marginalia resembles that commonly employed by Govaert Back. It is noticeable that an almanack for 1507 in the Bagford Collection is printed with two types apparently identical with those of Arnold's Chronicle. This almanack was printed by Adriaen van Berghen, who set up his press in or about the year 1500. An undated edition of Holt's Lac puerorum, in the colophon of which his name appears as 'Adriaen of Barrouwe' shews that he also was a printer of English books.

A single leaf of what appears to be an abridged edition of Arnold's Chronicle in quarto is among the Bagford fragments. It is signed c i, and contains part of the text on fo. lxiiij of the folio edition. This must naturally share the fortunes of the larger edition: there is nothing definite in it to justify any particular ascription.

Many of the points touched on in the preceding pages will receive amplification or commentary in the remarks appended to the collations in Part II., or in the introductory notes prefixed to the list of wood-cuts of the several books in Part III. In all probability a large number of books printed by J. van Doesborgh at present unknown will at some future time come to light; the constant discovery of fragments of previously unknown books, such as the Longer Accidence, Howleglas, or Euryalus and Lucretia, shews clearly enough that much yet remains to be done: much were to be hoped from a systematic search made in the libraries, private and public, of the Netherlands; but it is to be feared that this is at present wholly impracticable.

* (2) Oxford: Bodleian Library, bought November, 1891; wants leaves 23 and 26. Measures 175 x 123 mm.

References. Hazlitt, HB. p. 609, and BC. III. p. 248: Arber, "f". A copy sold in the Heber sale (part 5) for £3: 10.

Remarks. The first part of the present work, comprising the four and the fifteen tokens, is taken from the Coming of Anticrist in "L'art de bien mourir." The Four Tokens were separately reprinted by Wyer [British Museum, 4856. a.]. His colophon says that the tract is translated by "John Dousbrugh" from the Dutch. The correctness of this is shewn by the numerous Dutch words that are left in the English version. The Dutch text, no doubt a translation from the French, is found in the Oorspronck, No. 12 below, but the present book shews that it must have existed earlier. The tract called "Signa quindecim" [Hain 14731] is quite different from this. The origin of the latter part (ff. 23 to end) I have not ascertained, but it seems to be, like the rest, a translation from the Dutch, words like "gaet"; "mensche" for "go", "man", appearing in it.

*2. Van Pape Jans landendes. n.d. [c. 1506?] 4°.

Collation. A⁶ B⁴, by sheets: 10 ff.: 30 (29-31) ll. Text (30 ll.) measures 150 x 85 mm. Type 1.

Copy. * British Museum, C. 32. h. 6: title slightly damaged. Measures 193 x 129 mm.

References. M. Fred. Muller, Catalogue of books . . . on America . . . 1872, 8°, p. 277, No. 2277: Arber, Note, "c".

Remarks. According to M. Muller (l.c.) this version differs from all those in other languages, but is least unlike the French. MM. Enschede at Haarlem printed 30 copies with their fifteenth-century types [Muller, No. 2278]. It is quite different from the letter to King Emanuel, which is the usual form in which the story is found, but is substantially the same, though with many additions, omissions, and transpositions, as the text printed at the end of the Romance of the knight Owen, in an edition of about 1478 by G. Le Roy or Barthélemy Buyer at Lyon. The differences between this and the English text (No. 22) suggest an original from which both were translated independently.

3. Van der Nieuwer Werelt. n.d. [c. 1507?] 4°.

Collation. AB⁴, 8 ff. 30 and 31 ll. The text in the facsimile measures 149 × 90 mm. Type 1.

Begin, fo. 1 a: Van der nieuwer werelt oft landtſcap || nieuwelicx gheuōdē vādē doorluch || tighē coñ. vā Portugael door dē / || alder beſtē pyloet ofte zeekender d' werelt || [woodcut.] || Hoe noyt meeſter oft aſtroniḡ beſcreuē heeft dat || daer een lād̄t was bewoēt vā mēſchē ofte beeffen. End, fo. 8 a l. 20: aerden ſijn. || [ll. 21, 22 blank.] Gheprent Thantwerpen aen || Dyſeren waghe. Bi || Jā vā Doefborch || [2 lines blank] || E celo descendit vbum quod || gnothochyauton || Fo. 8 b, woodcut.

Copy. The only known copy is now in the Carter-Brown library at Providence, U.S.A. A reprint in facsimile of 25 copies only was issued at Providence in 1874 [*British Museum]. It is also described in M. Frederik Muller's Catalogue of Books on America, Amsterdam, 1872, 8°, pp. 5-7, No. 24. A facsimile of the first page is given as a frontispiece to the volume.

Reference. Arber, Note, "b". Harris, Bibl. Amer. Vetust., Additions, No. 15.

Remarks. It is stated in the book itself that the Dutch version is derived from a Latin translation of the Italian original. This is the letter describing his third voyage written to Lorenzo de' Medici by Vespucci. According to M. Muller, the present version is unique in giving a distinct date for the commencement of the voyage. The motto following the colophon supplies an explanation of the printer's device No. 3.

*4. Die reyse van Liſſebone. Dec. 1508. 4°.

Collation. (a) bC⁴: 12 ff.: mostly 32 ll. Text (32 ll.) 155 × 100 mm. Type 1.

Copies. 1) *British Museum [C. 32. f. 26], acquired 4 Dec. 1855: measures 191 × 135 mm.

2) In the Carter-Brown library, Providence, U.S.A.

References. The Athenæum for 5 Nov. 1892, p. 624, and for 20 Jan. 1894
p. 86, contains letters dealing with the present book and the voyage which it describes. In the second letter it is shewn that the date 1500 is an error for 1506. A facsimile reprint of this tract with a translation and introduction by Mr. C. H. Coote, was published (London, B. F. Stevens) in 1894.
To this book, which is entitled The Voyage from Lisbon to India, 1505-6, readers are referred for all information concerning the subject-matter.

*5. Longer Accidence. n.d. [c. 1509?] 4°.

Collation. A fragment consisting of four leaves, 1, 2, 5 and 6 of sig. B. 30 ll.
Text measures 147 × 92 mm. Type 1.

Begin, sig. B i a: peratyf mode of the passyfe voyce as docere How || . . . B 2 b,
l. 30: of the presentens / a participle of the pretertens / a || . . . B 5 a, l. 1:

|| [ll. 25, 26 blank.] || Hoc prefens opusculū p me Johānē || de Doesborch est
exaratum. || B 6 b: device 3 A.

Copy. *Corpus Christi College, Oxford. This fragment was used to line the boards of a volume printed in 1501. Measures 215 × 153 mm.

Remarks. This is the same Accidence as that printed by W. de Worde "In Caxons hous" at Westminster, about 1496, and subsequently printed by Pynson. The first line in this fragment corresponds to the last line of sig.
A 8 a in Worde's edition. No. 11 is an abridgment of this Accidence.

*6. Os facies mentum. n.d. [c. 1510?] 4°.

Collation. [2^a.] No signatures: 4 ff.: 21 ll. of each type to a page: types 1, 2.

Title [in large woodcut letters]: Os facies mētū || [cut]

Copies. (1) in the Huth collection; * (2) at Britwell (leaves 3, 4 slightly mutilated).

References. Huth Catal. vol. 3, p. 1070; Hazlitt, BC. I. p. 311.

Remarks. A fragment of another Antwerp edition of this little vocabulary, is preserved in the Lambeth Palace library [frag. 17].

7. Die Destructie van Troyen. n.d. [c. 1510-15?] F°.

Collation. a—k. 56 ff. 2 cols. Type 1?

Title [l. 1 is probably woodcut]. Die destructie vā || Troyen die laetste Ende die schoone amoreus || heyt van Troylus en der schoonder Breseda || Calcas docht' die een verrader was. || [Cut.]

End, fo. 55 b, col. 2. ¶ Hier es voleyndet die historie vā || d'amoreusyt van Troylus eñ Brise || da eñ ooc cortelic ouerlopē die destruc || tie vā Troyen. Gheprent Thant- || werpen aen dijseren waghe Bi mi || Jan van Doefborch || Fo. 56 blank?

Copy. The only known copy is (or was in 1869) in the library of the Duc d'Arenberg.

References. The above description is taken from the Bibliophile Belge [Bulletin of the Soc. des Bibliophiles Belges], Vol. 4, 1869, p. 18. See also Visser, Naamlijst . . . [Amst. 1767, 8°] p. 63: Meerman, De l'invention de l'imprimerie . . . [Par. 1809, 8°] pp. 373-4: Panzer, I. p. 15, No. 116: Hain, 5524: Van der Meersch, p. 131.

Remarks. The Bibl. Belge says that this book is probably an imitation of the mystery of the same name of which several editions were printed at Paris and Lyon. Otherwise it would be natural to suppose it a reprint of the earlier edition by R. van den Dorpe; see Campbell, Annales . . . No. 876.

8. Robin Hood. n.d. [c. 1510-15?] 4°.

Collation. A b⁶ c⁴ d⁶ e⁴, by sheets: 26 ff.: 28-33 ll.: text (33 ll., in facsimile) measures 162 × 88 mm. Type 1.

Begin, fo. 1 a: ¶ Here begynneth a gest || of Robyn Hode. || [cut.] || Lythe and listin gētilmen y' be of frebore || blode . . .

End, fo. 20 b, last line: There myght no man to thy truste. || [i.e. fit 6, stanza 33, l. 3.]

Ff. 21-26 unknown.

Copy. Advocates' Library, Edinburgh; No. 11 of the volume containing Chapman and Myllar's early productions. Wants ff. 6, 7, 13-18, 21-26.

References. Dickson and Edmond, Annals of Scottish Printing . . . [Cambr. (Aberdeen) 1890, 4°] pp. 68 sqq., with a facsimile of leaf 1, and table of types; it was reprinted in 1827 by Dr. Laing, with the other pieces in the volume.

*9. Aeneas Sylvius: Euryalus and Lucretia. n.d.? [c. 1515?] 4°.

Collation. Fragment of 4 ff., one gathering: 19 ll. left on fo. 2. The text is 88 mm. wide. Type 1.

Fo. 1 a, l. 1: f Ofias al was this a grete mysfde de he defē- || ded . . .

Fo. 2 a, l. 1: . . . myne frende Eureale and hath late fall of gre || te . . .

Copy. *Signet Library, Edinburgh: a fragment consisting of the upper half of two consecutive leaves from the middle of the piece, with small pieces of two other leaves attached.

Remarks. This fragment, discovered by Mr. E. Gordon Duff in 1891, appears to be an earlier English edition than any previously known. See Hazlitt, HB. p. 588, for three later editions, one of 1560, one of 1567, and one imperfect, but of about the same date. This last is a different translation from the present text; probably from the Latin. An edition was licensed to T. Norton in 1569-70: see Arber's Transcript of the Registers . . ., vol. 1, p. 189: Warton's Hist. of English Poetry, vol. 3, p. 416, note.

*10. Shorter Accidence. n.d. [c. 1515?] 4°.

Collation. [a⁴.] No signatures. 4 ff.: 31 ll. on fo. 1 a, without headline; the rest has headline and 29 ll. Text [fo. 3 a] measures 142 × 100 mm.

Type 1.

Begin, fo. 1 a:

Copy. *Oxford, Bodleian [4° A 18 Art BS.]; perfect: measures 184 × 127 mm.

References. Hazlitt, BC. I. p. 401.

Remarks. This is an abridgment of No. 5. The Bodleian copy is misbound, the title of a copy of Stanbridge's Accidence which follows in the volume being prefixed to it. Hence the description given by Hazlitt is erroneous.

*11. Laet's Prognostication for 1516. [1515-16.] 4°.

Collation. A fragment consisting of the first four leaves only; a⁴. 33 ll. Text measures 163 × 105 mm. Type 1?

Begin, fo. 1 a: ¶ The pronosticaciō of maister Jaspar late of borchloon/ || doctour in astrologie of the yere. Copies. 1) *British Museum [Harl. MS. (Bagford fragments) 5937. 58]; fo. 1 only. 2) Trinity College Cambridge [VI^o. 7. 24]; sheet a only; measures 202 × 134 mm. This is doubtless the copy sold at D. Laing's sale in 1879. It was acquired in 1882.

References. Hazlitt, BC. II. p. 331. Sinker, Catal. of Eng. Books, No. 985.

Remarks. I do not feel certain that J. v. D. is the printer of this book. The four leaves now known to exist afford no test by which the question can be decided.

*12. Den oorspronck onser salicheyt. May 1517. F^o.

Collation. A B C⁶ D⁺ E⁶ alternate sixes and fours to Y⁶. AA, BB⁺ CC⁶ DD⁺ alternate to JJ, KK⁶ LL, MM⁺ NN⁶ OO⁺ PP⁶ QQ⁺. 190 ff. 2 cols. 40 ll. Text measures 195 × 146 mm. Types 1, 2.

References. Arber, Note, "j". Holtrop, Monuments Typographiques, p. 5. Le Long, Boek-Zaal der Nederduytsche Bybels (Amst. 1732), p. 487 sqq.

Remarks. This is a curious collection of theological treatises, consisting chiefly of a life of Christ, descriptions of the virtues and vices, the last judgment, etc. It contains the Dutch text of the Fifteen Tokens (No. 1); but the English version there printed must be several years earlier than the date of this book.

13. Causes that be proponed and tracted . . . [After 12 Nov. 1517.] 4^o.

Black letter, with cuts.

Copy. West catalogue, lot 1851, No. 6; without printer's name, but apparently by J. van D.

References. Herbert, p. 1533. See also No. 16 below.

Remarks. The Latin original of this tract was printed about the same time by Michael Hillenius (Hoochstratanus) with the following title, under a woodcut of the Papal arms: ¶ Proposita ⁊ tractata in con- ¶ sultatione Scē expeditiōis q̄ ¶ ad Prīcipes mittēda vīsa sunt ¶ (etc.) This edition consists of four leaves in quarto, 44 lines to a page. 15. Chronike van Brabant. 1518. F°.

Collation. Unknown.

Copy. Royal Library, The Hague.

References. Arber, Note, "k": Conway, Woodcutters, p. 314.

Remarks. The edition of 1512, which contains the same cuts, is shewn by the letters h A e, which are found inside the first initial on the title, to have been printed by H. Eckert. In it are used some of G. Leeu's woodcut initials. There is a copy in the British Museum (9405 f.).

*16. The lyfe of Virgilius. n.d. [1518?] 4°.

Collation. A B* C* D* E F*, signed by sheets. 30 ff. 28, 29 ll., without head-lines. Text (on fo. 10) 144 × 87 mm. Type 1.

Remarks. This is probably a translation of the Dutch version printed about the same date by Vorsterman, which contains copies of some of the cuts in this edition. There is a copy of the Dutch edition in the British Museum [1073. b. 32]. The Dutch text is probably a translation from the French, in which language there are two undated editions, one printed by Guillaume Nyuerd, and the other for Jehan Saint Denis. The British Museum has a later edition of the English version, perhaps by W. Copland, about 1550. Bradshaw [l.c.] identifies with this edition the "virgilius in englis van 4 quaterni", a copy of which was sold by J. Dorne; but the fact that the present volume consists of six quires seems to render this impossible. Reprints of this edition were issued (1) by E. V. Utterson in 1812, for private circulation; (2) by W. J. Thoms, Early English Prose Romances, vol. 2, in 1828 and 1858. (3) by Prof. H. Morley in the Carisbrooke Library in 1889.

Note. In the sale catalogue of the library of James West, P.R.S., 1773, No. 1851, is a volume containing Nos. 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, and 22, together with one book printed by W. de Worde, one by Pynson, and four by Notary. This lot was sold to Ratcliffe for £2:17:6. In the Ratcliffe sale, however, (1776) only three of the Notary books are to be found in the catalogue. The volume appears in fact to have been split up. No. 13 disappears altogether; No. 14 found its way at a later time into the Douce collection: No. 22 became the property of Thomas Caldecott (1744-1833). At his sale in 1833 it was bought by Thorpe for Grenville (lot 1413) for £25:10:0. See also Quaritch's Dictionary of Book Collectors, part 4. Nos. 16-18 came into the possession of the duke of Roxburghe, by whom they were uniformly bound in calf, with the ducal arms. In the Roxburghe sale (1812), No. 17 (lot 6377) was sold for £65:2:0; No. 18 (lot 6378) for £67; No. 16 (lot 6376) for £54:12:0, probably to the duke of Marlborough, since in the sale of the White Knights library (7 June 1819) they reappear. No. 17 (lot 1726) was sold to Knell for £44:12:6; No. 18 (lot 2724) to Longman for £42; No. 16 (lot 4595) to Triphook for £29:8:0. No. 17 is found next as lot 656 in a miscellaneous sale by Evans on 5 June 1823, when it was sold to Thorpe (for Heber) for £24:10:0. No. 18 was sold in the Inglis sale (9 June 1826) to Thorpe for £24. Next comes the Hibbert sale of 16 March 1829, when Nos. 16 and 18 were sold both to Thorpe for Heber: No. 18 (lot 5369) fetched £14:3:6; No. 16 (lot 8400) fetched £29:18:6. Lastly all three reappear in part IX. of the Heber sale catalogues (11 Apr. 1836), when they were sold again to Thorpe for Mr. Christie Miller: No. 17 (lot 1267) for £16; No. 18 (lot 1949) for £16; No. 16 (lot 3145) for £25:10:0.

*2) part of fo. 12, in the British Museum, a Bagford fragment [Harl. 5963, No. 302, fo. 103].

References. Van der Meersch, p. 132: Hazlitt, HB. p. 212: Herbert, p. 1533.

Remarks. This is probably a translation from the Dutch, and bears marks of being by the same hand as Nos. 15, 16, 18, 19; the translator was possibly Lawrence Andrewe, certainly an Englishman: there is no trace of ignorance of English as in Nos. 1, 22. The original text of this tale appears to be the "Liebliche Historie von vier Kaufleuten," of which four editions printed in the fifteenth century are known. 1) An edition sine nota [Hain 8750; Muther, Die deutsche Bücher-Illustration, 1884, no. 810], of which there is a copy in the Berlin University Library; 2) Leipzig, Greg. Bötticher, 1495 [Muther 693], of which there are copies at Hannover [Bodemann, Incunabeln der k. Bibl. zu H., no. 156], and in the Berlin University Library. 3) Nürnberg, Hans Mair, 1498 [Hain 8751, Muther 440]. 4) Nürnberg, Hans Mair, 1499 [Hain 8752, Muther 441]. No edition of the Dutch version is known from which the present text can have been translated; but a copy of a later edition, printed by Vorsterman at Antwerp on 8 Feb. 1531, is in the Ghent University Library. It is entitled: "vā. heer. frederick vā Jenuen in Lombardiē een warachtige historie . . ." See Vanderhaeghen, Bibliotheca Belgica, Ser. 1, F 5. Two leaves of another English edition in quarto, with 32 lines to a page, perhaps printed by W. de Worde, are among the Douce fragments in the Bodleian. These leaves, with a facsimile of the woodcut, were reproduced by Dr. Furnivall in 1871 at p. xxvi of "Captain Cox and his books," published by the Ballad Society; and again in 1887 for the New Shakspeare Society [ser. vi., No. 14; pp. 26-28 (R. Laneham's Letter)]. In the British Museum [C. 20. c. 42 (6)] is a later edition, printed by Abr. Vele, which is a close reprint of the present edition.

Copy. *At Britwell, the only copy known; measures 169 × 118 mm. For its history see Note to No. 16.

References. Herbert, p. 1532: Hazlitt, HB. p. 381: Arber, Note, "i": Van der Meersch, p. 131.

Remarks. This tract is doubtless translated from the Dutch, but no edition of the Dutch text printed in the sixteenth century is known. There are however two editions of the seventeenth century. The first of these, which probably represents more or less faithfully the original text from which the English version is derived, was printed by Pauwels Stroobant at Antwerp in 1615. A copy of this edition, which has several woodcuts, is in the University Library at Ghent. It has been twice reprinted, once in 1853 by the Maetschappy der Vlaemsche Bibliophilen of Ghent, the editor being Baron J. de Saint-Genois, and again by Prof. J. van Vloten at The Hague in 1854. The other edition of the Dutch text was printed at Utrecht in 1608 by Herman van Borculo. It has not been reprinted, but its variant readings, and other information concerning it, are given by Prof. van Vloten's edition. It differs from the Antwerp edition in having been expurgated by a Protestant editor, who omitted passages of a Catholic tendency. There is a copy of this edition in the Royal Library at the Hague.

Copy. • British Museum [C. 34. f. 51], rescued from a binding: presented in 1887. Ff. 1-3 are bound after ff. 4-8. Measures 193 x 152 mm.

Remarks. Two editions printed by R. Copland [British Museum, C. 21. c. 53 and 57] are as regards the text almost word for word the same as this edition, even the spelling being for the most part preserved; but the chapter headings sometimes differ. A third edition printed by one of the Coplands is also known. See Dr. Furnivall's Captain Cox and his books [Ballad Society, Lond. 1871], p. xlviii. A good account of Eulenspiegel, especially of this English version (as printed by Copland), is given by C. H. Herford, The literary relations of England and Germany [Camb. 1886], p. 283 sqq. J. M. Lappen-berg, Dr. Thomas Murner's Ulenspiegel [Leipz. 1854], p. 153, describes an edition in Dutch, printed at Antwerp by M. Hillen, without date. This Dutch text contains only a selection of the tales found in the German original; the fact that the English version is identical in this respect seems to shew clearly that it is a translation from the same Dutch text, though not necessarily from this edition of it.

Thuys der fortunē ende dat huys der doot.

Fr. Olthoff: De Boekdruckers boekverkoopers en uitgevers in Antwerpen, 1891, p. 26, mentions a copy as having been sold at Antwerp in the De la Faille sale, 1878, for 135 fr.

Remarks. This book is made up of several parts. Fo. 2, describing a voyage of 1496 (the only part in this volume relating to America), appears to be translated from a lost book, to which the cut on fo. 2 a, and one in the Dieren Palleys, may have belonged. Ff. 2-7 a are a free translation from ff. 1 b-6 b of the Reyse vān Lissebone. The paragraph on fo. 7 b is an expansion of a line and a half on fo. 1 b of the Reyse, which are omitted in the translation. Fo. 8 a is taken from fo. 12 a of the Reyse; but the two last lines are interpolated. The second part of the book is a translation of a Dutch version of the Traſtatus de decem nationibus christianorum, which is usually appended to the Itinerarius of Johannes de Hese. The third part is the same tract as No. 2 (Van Pape Jans landendes), but appears to be an independent translation from a Latin or French original; see remarks on No. 2 above. A curious point is the insertion of the name of the king of England near the end; this is not found in the Dutch text.

Remarks. According to the Bibl. Belge this work has no connection with that of Raoul Le Fèvre. The part relating to Hercules is omitted here, and was printed separately as a sort of second part; see No. 25.

Remarks. The German rhymed original, on which the present text is based, by Philip Frankfurter, is reprinted in Hagen's Narrenbuch, 1811, where a long note is given, and some prose versions mentioned, all, however, of far later date than the present edition. Gödecke, Geschichte der deutschen Dichtung Bd. 1, pp. 116, 117, gives copious references, mentioning a sine nota edition of the fifteenth century in the Stadtbibliothek at Hamburg. Weller, Repertorium typographicum, No. 34, assigns this edition to the first quarter of the sixteenth century. It has 36 woodcuts. This text has been reprinted in Kürschner's Deutsche National-Litteratur, vol. 11, pp. 7-86. Two leaves of an early edition of a version in Low German are now in the Royal Library at Berlin. See the Jahrbuch des Vereins für niederdeutsche Sprachforschung [1887], Bd. XIII., p. 129 sqq., where the English text is reprinted in full from the Douce copy. The "Pfaff von Kalenberg" was named Wigand von Theben. A description of the Douce copy is given by C. H. Herford, The Literary Relations of England and Germany, p. 272 sqq., who also gives an account of the origin of the tale. Douce supposes the translator to be Richard Arnold; but there is no evidence in favour of this view. It is remarkable that with the exception of a single cut, none of the ornaments in this book are found in any other of Doesborgh's productions at present known.

Remarks. These curious 'Lives of nine bad men' are described at some length in the Bibl. Belge. The author appears to be unknown.

Copy. The only known copy passed through the Lammens, van Coetsem and Capron collections, and is now in the Bibliothèque Royale at Brussels.

References. Vanderhaeghen, Bibliotheca Belgica, Ser. 1, C 24. For the Capron sale, in which it was lot 481, see the Bibliophile Belge, 1874, p. 332. The piece was reprinted by the Société des Bibliophiles Belges, at the end of the French original, edited by M. Jules Petit [Brussels 1869], with facsimiles of ff. 1 a and 16 b.

Remarks. For a discussion of the authorship of this poem, see M. Petit's preface. It is a translation in nine-line stanzas by Colyn Coellin of Brussels of the French poem by Pierre Michault entitled Le pas de la mort. It is remarkable as being the only poetical piece known to exist from the press of J. v. Doesborgh.

Copy. *British Museum [C. 21. a. 54]; perfect, but much worn. Measures 125 x 89 mm. On the title page is written: "Wm Herbert. 1786."

References. Herbert, p. 1529, describes this copy; but on the flyleaf he has written a reference to p. 412 of his book, on which mention is made not of this, but of the other edition, No. 32. Hazlitt, BC. III. p. 98.

Remarks. The size of the book, and the character of the cuts on the last page, render the attribution to J. v. D. doubtful. The imposition is extremely faulty, which looks as if the printer was unaccustomed to print books in octavo; the use of a cross stroke through ll is not confined to J. van Doesborgh, though commonly used by him. In the Bibliophile Belge, Vol. 14, 1879, p. 380, is given a facsimile of part of a broadsheet relating to the coinage, printed "aen dijseren waghe," in all probability, like Campbell 1733, by R. vanden Dorpe, about 1499-1500. A strong argument in favour of J. van Doesborgh as the printer of the present work is the fact that the two cuts of coins given in the facsimile are from the same blocks, in a much better state, as the cuts found here on ff. 19 b, 20 a (the French blanks).

31. On the Pestilence.

A copy of a treatise on the Pestilence, possibly printed by J. v. D., is said to exist in the library of the late Maurice Johnson, Esq., of Spalding. A search among that part which is still kept at Spalding produced no result.

32. The valuation of gold and silver. n.d.

The valucion of Golde and Siluer. Made in the famous Citie of Antwarpe, and newly Translated into Englishe by me Laurens Andrewew/
Emprentyd in the famous Cite of Andwarpe.

Reference. Herbert, p. 412, who makes no mention of any copy as being known to him.

Remarks. There can be little doubt that this book as described is a production of Jan van Doesborgh's press. There seems to have been some confusion in Herbert's mind between this edition and that mentioned on p. 1529, for which see No. 30 above.

PART III.

§ 1. THE WOODCUT ILLUSTRATIONS.

The following abbreviations are used in Part 3 for books therein cited. The measurements given are all in millimetres.

1. FT. The Fifteen Tokens.
2. PJ. Van Pape Jans landendes.
3. NW. Van der Nieuwer Werelt.
4. RL. Die Reyse van Lissebone.

23. WS. The Wonderful Shape.
26. PK. The Parson of Kalenborowe.
29. BC. The Brabant Chronicle of 1530.

1. The Fifteen Tokens.

The woodcuts in this book fall into two main divisions. The first (A), illustrating the tokens, seem to be imitations of those used by A. Vêrard's printer in the English edition of the Ars moriendi of 1503. The second (B), mostly very small, illustrate the Passion. The origin of these is not known to me.

There are in addition one or two cuts (C) not belonging to either of the above sets, and a large initial, for which see § 3. The cut on fo. 1 b is by the same hand as the figures of female saints in the Brabant Chronicle.

The broken state of the enclosing lines of the "A" cuts suggests their having been used before. A few of them have double lines, like the Oorspronck set A. The following list is incomplete, as neither of the known copies contains leaf 23.

1. Sig. a 1 a. Men and women mad. [A.] 64 × 75.
2. a 1 b. A doctor writing at his desk. [C.] 126 × 81.
3. a 4 a. The sea, with fishes, rising in a cone. [A.] 66 × 75.

6. a 6 b. The sea burning with fire. [A.] 52 × 58.
7. b 1 a. Trees sweating blood: birds, one with a worm. [A.] 65 × 74.
8. b 1 b. Buildings falling to pieces. [A.] 66 × 73.
9. b 2 b. Rocks clashing together. [A.] 65 × 76.
10. b 3 a. Earthquake: in front, a woman falling; at back, animals. [A.] 65 × 75.
11. b 3 b. Rocks [14] floating in the sea. [A.] 65 × 74.
- b 4 a. = No. 1, more broken.
12. b 4 b. Skeletons lying. [A.] 64 × 76.
13. b 5 a. Stars falling; below, animals howling. [A.] 65 × 75.
14. b 6 b. All men and women fall dead. [Cut much injured. A.] 65 × 75.
15. c 1 b. Men and women arise from graves on land and in sea. [A.] 66 × 73.
16. c 2 b. A man with his hands bound is dropt down a well by two men: king behind. [Oorspronck set A: C.] 70 × 70.
17. c 6 a. The last judgment, with instruments of Passion. [A.] 89 × 67.
18. c 6 b. Crucifix, T shape. [B.] 47 × 48.
19. c 6 b. Instruments of Passion; a heart in centre. [B.] 22 × 54.
20. d 1 a. Pillar and scourge. [B.] 37 × 14.
21. d 1 b. Crown of thorns. [B.] 18 × 16.
22. d 1 b. Heart pierced by a spear. [B.] 36 × 13.
23. d 2 a. Two pierced hands. [B.] 36 × 18.
24. d 2 a. Two pierced feet. [B.] 19 × 13.
25. d 2 a. Angel holding a cross. [C.] 58 × 40.
26. d 2 a. Birch rod and scourge. [B.] 30 × 17.
27. d 2 b. Seamless robe. [B.] 36 × 25.
28. d 2 b. Head with eyes bound, and halo. [B.] 31 × 21.
29. d 3 a. Rope tied in a coil. [B.] 35 × 11.
30. d 3 b. Head spitting (placed sideways). [B.] 19 × 19.
31. d 3 b. Hand pulling hair or beard. [B.] 18 × 16.
32. d 3 b. Three dice. [B.] 16 × 19.
33. d 3 b. Money coming out of a bag. [B.] 17 × 16.
34. d 4 b. Virgin and Child. [C.] 42 × 35.
35. d 4 b. Small kneeling figure. [A side piece. C.] 42 × 22.
36. e 2 a. Christ before Caiaphas. [Worn: C.] 43 × 55.
37. e 2 b. Christ scourged by two men. [C.] 43 × 55.

- 38. c 2 b. Christ seated in robe and crown. Two men with a stick twist the crown. [Double lines: C.] 55 x 61.
- 39. c 3 a. Procession: Christ bearing the cross. [C.] 44 x 73.
- 40. c 3 b. Crucifixion. [Double lines: C.] 99 x 70.
- 41. c 4 b. Device No. 1.

2. Van Pape Jans landendes.

Nearly all the cuts used here reappear in the New Lands in an inferior condition. All except No. 10, and perhaps No. 7, are by the same hand.

- 1. Fo. 1 a. Man with calf's head carrying a large fish on his back. 62 x 27.
- 2. 1 a. Elephant with howdah. 63 x 28.
- 3. 1 a. Griffin flying with a man in his claws. 63 x 28.
- 4. 1 a. Three boys and three ostriches. [A break in the top line not found in NL.] 64 x 64.
- 2 a. = No. 2.
- 5. 2 b. Naked savage with one eye carrying club. 62 x 27.
- 6. 3 a. Similar savage with horse's hoofs. 61 x 28.
- 4 a. = No. 4.
- 7. 4 b. Circular cut of Sagittarius with a double line. diam. 37.
- 8. 5 a. Phoenix on the fire. 63 x 28.
- 5 b. = No. 3.
- 7 a. = No. 1.
- 9. 7 b. A tree dropping blood into a tub: guarded by a dragon. 62 x 31.
- 10. 9 a. Two triangular cuts in juxtaposition.
 - i. Angel holding a scroll. 60 x 70.
 - ii. Man wearing turban in bed. 76 x 72.
- 11. 10 b. = FT. 34. [The top line in FT. shews a break only slightly, but undoubtedly, indicated here. The apparent difference may perhaps be accounted for by the much blacker printing of the cut here. The R. hand of the Virgin has a break not in FT.]
- 12. 10 b. Device No. 2.

3. Van der nieuwer werelt.

The measurements given for Nos. 3 and 4 depend for their correctness on the correspondence of the size in the facsimile with that of the original. No. 2 belongs to the Oorspronck set B, and is of much better workmanship than the others. No. 1 reappears in the Reyse van Lissebone and in the New Lands.

- 1. Fo. 1 a. Double cut; the two compartments are at right angles.
 - i. A naked man and woman. ii. Two men, one bearded, and a woman, clothed. (In facsimile 76 x 80: in NL. 79 x 80.)
- 2. 1 b. Jonah thrown to the whale; arch. (In facs. 93 x 53: in O. 97 x 53.)

3. 3 a. Four naked women, one with a bow. (80 × 81.)
4. 4 b. Three savages fighting other three with bows; double lines. (91 × 76.)
5. 6 a. Canopus: six stars and 16 S-shaped figures. No edges.
- 6 b. = No. 1.
6. 7 a. Canopus: three stars and 16 S-shaped figures. No edges.
- 8 b. = No. 2.

4. Die reyse van Lissebone.

All these cuts reappear in the New Lands. They seem to be by the same cutter as Nos. 2-4 in the Van der Nieuwer Werelt.

1. Fo. 1 a. Naked family: GENNEA. 68 × 71.
- 1 b. = No. 1.
2. 2 a. Man, woman and child seated: IN. ALLAGO. 67 × 70.
3. 2 b. Man and woman; a child between them. IN. ARABIA. 68 × 80.
4. 3 a. Similar group: child dances. MAIOR: INDIA. 67 × 75.
5. 3 b. A tree. 66 × 73.
6. 4 a. Two savages fighting; one has bow, the other shield and sword. 67 × 83.
7. 4 b. Native chief borne in state on a stretcher. A large cut without edge lines; placed sideways. 105 × 145.
8. 11 a. = NW. 1.
9. 12 b. Device 3 A.

5. Longer accidence.

Last page. Device No. 3 A.

6. Os facies mentum.

Fo. 1 a. = FT. 2.

7. Destructie van Troyen.

This edition probably contains the woodcuts used by R. van den Dorpe in his edition of this or another work with the same title, for which see Conway, p. 317-318. According to the Bibliophile Belge, vol. 4, p. 19, the title-page has two cuts in juxtaposition; there are 23 cuts in the text, many repeated from older books; one cut is taken from the Chevalier délibéré [Campbell 1083].

8. Robin Hood.

Fo. 1 a. Robin Hood on horseback. [In facs. 76 × 92.] Facsimile in Dickson and Edmond, p. 69.

9. Euryalus and Lucretia.

There is part of a woodcut visible on one of the leaves of the only fragment known, but it is not large enough to give any clue to the subject or its treatment.

12. Den oorspronck onser salicheyt.

In the illustrations of this book several sets of cuts are clearly distinguishable.

The first set (called A) are for the most part square and enclosed by double lines. A few, however, have thick single lines: and there are some cuts resembling this set in the following list which are probably the work of another hand: these are Nos. 11, 12, and 217. Set B is of far better work and of French origin. One of the cuts appears in NW., so the set must have long been in the printer's possession. The design in this set is usually arched over. Set C is a set of small cuts, very clumsy and rude. Those representing the ten commandments (Nos. 179 to 190) appear to be by the same hand, though the size differs slightly. A few cuts (Nos. 17, 18, 176) have some points of resemblance to the rest, but are very doubtful.

The greater part of Set A of the Fifteen Tokens is repeated here, with two cuts (Nos. 192, 211), which do not appear in that book, unless they are found on the missing leaf 23.

A set of cuts representing events in the life of Antichrist (Nos. 194 to 198) appear to be by the same hand as set A. A number of cuts representing the deadly sins as women, apparently belonging to set C (Nos. 226, etc.), are copies, not perhaps at first hand, of those in the Buch der Sieben Todsünden, printed by J. Bämle at Augsburg. A very close copy of No. 130 (set C) is found in the 'Walsche Schoelmeester' of Noel de Berlaimont, printed at Antwerp by Hans de Laet in 1545.

Besides these larger sets we find a few odd cuts, and small sets. One of these (Nos. 47, 134, 147, etc.) is a series of half-length figures which look as if they had formed part of a blockbook. Another (Nos. 19, 23, 40) is imitated from the cuts at the top of the pages in the Biblia pauperum. These, with two cuts of set B and one of set C, are used in combination with the mottoes and texts to form pages directly copied from the arrangement in the Biblia pauperum blockbooks. Another small set consists of the Evangelists' symbols (Nos. 38, 61, 164, 218) and four cuts of saints (Nos. 193, 245 to 247).

1-6. A 1 a. Six cuts representing the six days of creation. Each 56-7 × 45.

7, 8. A 1 a. Two blocks on which the title is cut.

14. Letter of B. de Clereville.

No. 1 is an imitation of the Chronicle series, and is used in the edition of 1512 printed by H. Eckert. A copy of this cut is used on fo. 99 b of the Dutch Bible printed by Claes de Grave, 28 June 1518. The copy is much damaged. That it is a copy and not the original seems clear from the fact that a slightly smaller size is obtained by omitting part of the design round the edge. Nos. 2-4 appear to belong to one set.

1. 1 a. A battle. One army retreats to the right behind rocks; a horseman bearing a bird on his shield is unhorsed. The other army advances; the leader, a lion on his shield, brandishes a sword. 103 x 102.
2. 1 b. A man with a spear gives a letter to a youth in a doorway. 69 x 51.
3. 3 b. A man with long hair carrying a letter, lifts his hat. A fox's brush hangs down his back. 70 x 50.
4. 3 b. A Pope with triple cross and crown blesses. 72 x 28.

15. Brabant Chronicle.

This edition (Conway, p. 314) contains the set of Chronicle cuts first used by R. van den Dorpe in 1497, and again by Eckert in 1512. It is probable that most of the additional cuts found in the edition of 1530 (see below) are not employed here.

16. Virgilius.

Nos. 1, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 appear to belong to one set, whether cut for this edition or not it is difficult to say. They are perhaps by the same hand as Nos. 3 and 13. The rest are chiefly odd cuts. Nos. 3 and 13 belong to the Oorspronck set A. No. 4 seems to be German work. Nos. 1, 5, 6, 7, 11 are copied in the Dutch edition printed by Vorsterman.

1. Fo. 1 a. The Romans lighting their candles. [A.] 83 x 65.

15. 30 a. The arms of England crowned. 71 x 48.
16. 30 b. Device 3 B.

17. Frederick of Jennen.

Several of the cuts [A.] in this book are quite distinct from those in any other of J. van Doesborgh's productions. The work is fine, and detail is greatly insisted on. Of the rest those marked [B.] seem to belong together. The rest are doubtful. One, No. 3, belongs to the Parson of Kalenborowe set. No. 24 is copied in the Dutch Virgilius printed by Vorsterman. Nos. 8, 11, 13, 20, 21, 23 are copied in the English edition printed by A. Vele.

- 25 b. = No. 26.

18. Mary of Nemmegen.

Of the cuts in this book, all except Nos. 5, 6, 12, 13 belong to a single set, and are certainly above the average of the illustrations used by our printer. The surrounding line is double, connected at the corners by short diagonal lines.

1. Fo. 1 a. The devil appears to Mary as she sits under the hedge. 86 x 83.
2. 1 b. Mary taking leave of her uncle. 87 x 84.

19. Howleglas.

The existing fragment has only one cut, doubtless one of a set. It is a rude performance, without any attempt at a background.

- J4 a. Howleglas hands the pot to the winedrawer at Lübeck. 78 x 63.

20. Thuys der fortunē.

This book contains cuts. There is no doubt that the six cuts entitled 'The house of death' in DP. and WS. are reproductions of pages in this edition: the two cuts representing the ages of man and the corresponding animals very probably also come from the same source.

21. Der dieren palley.

With a few exceptions the cuts in this book belong to a single set. These are all more or less bad, the majority execrable, a few atrocious, one or two, especially those which look like illustrations to Aesop (Nos. 163, 164), almost tolerable. That they were not designed for this particular edition is shown by their broken condition, and by the fact that at least one belonged to J. van Doesborgh in 1518 (FJ. no. 17). Another occurs at about the same date in Virgilius. The rest of the cuts are chiefly apospasmatia. Those marked B (Nos. 37, 39, 48, 66) belong to the curious archaistic set which occurs in the Oorspronck. Those (Nos. 169 sqq.) called C are apparently by the same hand as set B in the Fifteen Tokens. Those cuts which do not belong to any set in particular are called A. Some of these are noticeable: Nos. 9 to 14, and possibly 5, 6, 8, 15, 168, as being cuts from the book called Thuys der fortunēn. No. 7 is an old fifteenth-century cut, which came from Delft to Antwerp with H. Eckert. No. 126 is particularly interesting, as being one of the set used in the Nieuwer Werelt, but not found in any of Doesborgh's known American books: compare New lands, No. 1. No. 137 is very curious, and it is difficult to conjecture its source: the work is very good. No. 199 is apparently from a devotional book. Those cuts which reappear in NL. are all in a better state here, and help to fix a date for that work. There are also two cuts taken from the Fifteen Tokens, and one from the Oorspronck set A.

22. The New Lands.

The cuts in this book are for the most part a collection of those in the three books, Nos. 2, 3, 4; one comes from No. 1. No. 19 occurs in the Chronicle of 1530. No. 18 seems to be by the same hand as the Oorspronck set C. No. 1 is interesting, as apparently belonging (with DP. 126) to a lost book like PJ., NW., and RL.

23. The wonderful shape.

The cuts are almost all the same as in the Dieren Palley's, the smaller number being due partly to omissions, partly to the imperfection of the only copy. There are, however, a few cuts which are new: nearly all (Nos. 33, 49, 53, etc.) belong to the ordinary set. The reader is, however, warned that owing to the large number of cuts, and the impossibility of examining the actual books side by side, the identification, or the contrary, of particular cuts is in a few cases uncertain, though it is hoped that no serious mistake has been made. The only new cut not belonging to the set is No. 326, one of the grammar-cuts of a master and pupils which are so common at this period.

24. Van Jason ende Hercules.

There are, according to the Bibliophile Belge, 37 cuts in this book, four of which are on the title.

25. Die historie van Hercules.

The cuts in this book are repeated from those in No. 24. Two cuts and a border are on the title-page, and there is one cut after the colophon.

26. The parson of Kalenborowe.

These cuts, which are all of one set, are of a most excruciating character; the woodcutter has not the slightest notion of either design or execution.

1. 5 b. Two peasants drinking under a tree. 63 x 43.
2. 5 b. The parson with wings on battlements: below, a cask. 63 x 33.
3. 7 a. The parson at mass. 66 x 47.
4. 10 a. The parson and bishop at the foot of some steps. 66 x 46.
5. 11 a. The parson talks with the bishop's lady. 69 x 64.
6. 12 a. The parson under the bishop's bed. 66 x 67.
7. 13 a. The parson washing. 38 x 35.
8. 13 a. The duchess and her gentleman riding by. 53 x 73.

9. 16 a. The parson brings two peasants naked before the duke. 64 x 83.
10. 19 b. The parson shews the duke his horse on a trencher. 66 x 72.
11. 21 a. The parson on his horse in a dung cart. 57 x 87.

16. 24 a. The parson in his vestments in a field. 62 x 33.
- 25 a. = No. 16.
17. 25 a. Bailiff and churchwarden. 66 x 39.

27. Der IX quaesten.

According to the Bibliophile Belge, there are 35 cuts, many of peculiar style, in this work, including:

1. On title, repeated in the work; Mohammed and Mary surprised in bed together by Mohammed's wife Cadiga.
2. Fo. 20 b. A man in monkish costume, brandishing in his left hand a huge sword, preaches in a church to a group of nuns.
3. The joys of the Mohammedan paradise.
4. A cut between two borders, of Mohammed carried by three devils into hell.
5. Judas killing his father; a beautiful landscape.
6. Device 3 B.

28. Tdal sonder wederkeeren.

The following description of the illustrations in this book is taken from Vanderhaeghen and the reprint mentioned in Part II.

1. Fo. 1 a. Death holding an arrow, seated on a coffin in a tent, which occupies a narrow pass between rocks. The pass on each side of the tent is blocked with corpses. On the rocks on the left is 'Accident' seated on a tusked animal which has crossbows for ears, daggers for a mane; two of its legs are swords, and two birch rods; its tail is formed by a three-headed snake. On the rocks on the right is 'Antike,' an old man on crutches, and 'Maladie,' a woman seated. (In facsimile 123 x 119 mm.) Reproduced in the reprint.
2. 3 b. 'Accident' from the title cut.
3. 3 b. Side-piece, 'Astor.'
4. 5 b. 'Antike' and 'Maladie' from the title cut.
5. 5 b. Side-piece, Death carrying a coffin.
6. 7 b. 'Oudtheyt.'
- 7 b. = No. 5.
7. 9 b. 'Exces' as death's herald.
8. 9 b. Persons of different conditions at his side.
9. 12 a. Death drags to him an emperor, a king of France, and a prince.
10. 12 b. Death attacking burghers.

11. 14 a. Man reading ; a vignette [probably = bc. 119].
12. 15 b. 'Lustige jeuchden,' two naked women.
15 b. = No. 6.
13. 16 b. Device 3 B.

29. Brabant Chronicle, 1530.

The chief set of cuts used in this book is that designed for R. van den Dorpe's edition of 1497. Before being used by J. van Doesborgh (not later than the beginning of 1518; see L.), these cuts had passed through the hands of Hendrik Eckert, who employed them in his edition of 1512. He also used two cuts in imitation of the original set; these are found in the present edition, and one of them is No. 1 in L. See below, Nos. 31, 44. There are also two cuts (Nos. 40, 60), apparently belonging to the original set, but not mentioned by Mr. W. M. Conway ("Woodcutters of the Netherlands," pp. 314-17). I have considered a reference to his book a sufficient description, and have indicated by an asterisk those cuts which occur in the edition of 1512. It seems on the whole most probable that J. van Doesborgh inherited the set from R. van den Dorpe with his other typographical apparatus, and lent it to Eckert in 1512. Otherwise it is difficult to explain the fact that isolated cuts are found in books printed by Claes de Grave in 1517 and 1520 (not 1527), and by W. Vorsterman in 1531, at a time when they demonstrably belonged to J. van Doesborgh.

Other, smaller, sets are indicated by the letters B to G. Of these F and G alone call for remark. The cuts in set F are of a late date, but have a distinctive character; they are in the style of the middle of the sixteenth century, and shew considerable skill in the execution. Some of the cuts in set F are copies of those in the great Augsburg Thewrdanck of 1517. Nos. 82, 90, and 91 are fairly close reproductions of those numbered 110, 12 or 25, and 29 respectively. Nos. 92, 93, 94 are close copies in reverse of 75, 100, and 108 of the Thewrdanck. Those of set G apparently belong to an astronomical work, and are dragged in here rather promiscuously. They are also in a late style. One of these, however, No. 84, is earlier: it is found in the same state in the prognostication for 1507 printed by Adr. van Berghen (Br. Mus., MS. Harl.—Bagford fragments—5937.21). A few odd cuts remain. A large one of Charles V. (No. 102) was used by M. Hillenius (the publisher of this edition) in 1520. Others are taken from earlier books of our printer. Lastly, there are a few doubtful and miscellaneous cuts, which have no letter or reference attached to them, and do not clearly connect themselves with anything in particular.

1. Sig. A 1 a. Block on which are cut the first two lines of the title. 57 × 174.

30. The valuation of gold and silver.

The cuts in this book are with the exception of those on the last page all illustrations of coins, and belong to one set: they are probably identical with those used in 1500 by Liesvelt, and enumerated by Conway on p. 314. There are, however, 31 cuts, while Conway mentions 17 only. Nos. 27, 28 are found in an earlier broadside printed at the Iron Balance: see p. 37, above. Of the cuts on the last page, the upper is clearly distinguished by the interlaced branches above; the work is close and fine. It is a copy in reverse of one used at the beginning of the sixteenth century by several printers at Köln, among others by Martin von Werden in 1509, on the title of the Consolatorium Johannis de Tambaco, and in 1507 by Johann Landen. The lower cut is very rude and poor. These are quite different from any used elsewhere by J. v. Doesborgh.

§ 2. THE BORDERS.

Borders are used by Jan van Doesborgh chiefly for the purpose of framing in woodcut illustrations, but they are also occasionally employed to fill up a vacant space at the foot of a page or column. The borders used in FT. and PK. are undoubtedly of French origin; the others are not distinctively French in style, and are probably of local execution. In the following list the borders are primarily arranged in chronological order by the book in which they are first found, and secondarily by the position of each in the book where it is first found.

Border 1.

Alternate rosettes, divided by a zigzag line. Two blocks, one of which (B) has an oblong piece broken out of one end. Both measure 56×9 mm.

[A.] FT. 1a: 5a: 5b: 10b: 13b.

[B.] FT. 4a: 9a: 12b.

Border 2.

Large roselike flowers, all turned in the same direction, with one leaf: each is divided from the other by a thin white perpendicular line. Three blocks.

[A] measures 88×10 mm., and is a good deal worn, more so in PJ. than in FT. [B] measures 86×10 mm. [C] measures as [B], but is broken on one of the long sides.

[A.] FT. 14b: 17b: 21a.

PJ. 9a.

[B.] FT. 1a: 14b: 18a: 22b.

PJ. 4a: 9a: 10a.

[C.] FT. 1a.

Border 3.

A continuous flower and leaf pattern. The flower at one end has a broad-arrow mark on it. Two blocks; [A] 75×10 , [B] 74×10 mm. In all places except the first, B has a corner broken off. This injury is rather larger in PJ. than in FT.

[A.] FT. 1a (joined to B): 18b (one side).

[B.] FT. 1a: 13b: 18b (the other side): 26a.

PJ. 9a.

Border 4.

Wooden stems placed zigzag: from each springs a flower, filling up the angle.

There are two blocks of this, but they are not distinguishable. 90×11 mm.

FT. 1 b (both blocks): 8 a: 12 a: 22 b: 25 b: 26 b.

Border 5.

Foliage wreathed round a staff. On ff. 22 b, 25 a it is much worn. Measures 40×10 mm.

FT. 1 b: 7 b: 9 b: 22 b: 25 a.

Border 6.

Long serrated foliage in shallow curves alternately concave and convex. Measures 76×10 mm.

FT. 7 a: 8 b.

Border 7.

A flower pattern resembling No. 3. The flowers are star-shaped, and have five petals. Measures 43×11 .

FT. 10 a: 11 a: 22 b: 26 a.

Border 8.

A large design in two parts. (a) Border with four dragons and a snail, separated by flowers. (b) A triple pendant, the centre having two grotesque heads. These are always used at the bottom of the page, and thick lead lines frame the other three sides. There are two blocks of (a), which has a white design on a black ground; in (a 1) the snail is at the right hand end, in (a 2) it is in the middle. Measurements: (a 1) measures at first 173×9 ; at sig. D it becomes $171-2$, at sig. J it falls to 168. (a 2) is at first 170×10 , but at sig. D becomes $167-8$. (b) measures 171×20 in the centre. An asterisk prefixed to (a) denotes that the border is placed upside down.

This border is only found in O.

There are two blocks of this border, differing at one end. [A] measures 139 x 10 mm.; [B] measures at first 137, then in DP, where one end is broken, 136 mm. On the title of FJ. this border occurs, and agrees with [B] except in the measurement, which is 138 mm.

Border 18.

Architectural border in three divisions: a) a zigzag pattern: b) six ceiling panels in perspective: c) three semicircular projections. There are at least two blocks of this. In V. it measures 101 x 13 mm.; in FJ., fo. 6 a, what may be the same block measures 98: this is the same as the one used in DP., where it is 97 mm. But in FJ., fo. 20 b, one end is broken off, so that it measures only 92 mm. This, therefore, cannot be the same block as that used in DP.

Border 19.

A border resembling No. 9, but on a larger scale. The line dividing the rosettes is a single thick one, and there is an outer black line attached on one of the long sides. This line is in some of the blocks thin (as used in MN., FJ., H., WS.), in others thick. There appear to be numerous different blocks of this border; but it is very difficult to distinguish them clearly. In V. only two appear to be used: No. 1 has only half a rosette at one end, while No. 2 has nearly three-quarters. In BC. this border appears in a mutilated condition.

Border 20.

A simple pattern of rude trefoils connected by curves; a double line below.

There are many blocks of this border, which are difficult to distinguish. In V. only one block is used, measuring 64-5 mm., unless that on fo. 30 b differs from that on 30 a. In FJ. there are three blocks; [A] measuring 84 mm.; [B] originally measuring 85, but now broken in two pieces of 66 and 19 mm., and separated [B 1, B 2]; [C] measuring 63-4 mm., possibly the same as that used in V. In MN. [A] and [B] are used; the latter has its two pieces placed together. In DP. only [B 1] and [C] are found; the latter is broken, and near the end quite worn out. The example of [C] used in NL., which is not broken, must, unless the book be wrongly placed after DP., be a duplicate block.

Semicircular curves, where they join running to a point, which is topt by a trefoil. From the base of each trefoil on each side to the central point of each curve run opposing curves: at the middle of these curves is a sort of twist. This border is open at the top, but has a bounding line at the bottom. There are three blocks of this border, with slightly different patterns.

[A.] measuring 67×13 mm., has the twist small, and above it one or more independent dots or small circles. The bounding line is prolonged perpendicularly at both ends.

[B.] measures 68×13 mm. The twist is larger; there are no dots; and there is a perpendicular bounding line at one end only.

[C.] measures 70×13 mm. It is like [B.], but has the bounding line at both ends.

vi. Thick quasi-Lombardic three-line, I only, the upright consisting of two strokes.

PJ. 4 b.

vij. A two-line E formed of thin black lines enclosing white spaces: the cross-stroke has diagonal black lines.

O. M 2 b (2).

¶ ORNAMENTS.

- i. A Maltese cross: there are two sizes of these, and they are usually combined with arrangements of stops such as . . :/:)():(to form a line.
FJ. : MN. : H. : BC. (smaller cross only).
- ij. A six-rayed star, 22 mm. in diameter.
WS. q 1 a.
- iii.  This is used very frequently in BC., chiefly in combination with iv., at the sides of the cuts in the Chronicle set. The greatest number found on one page is 44 on E e 1 a and G g 4 a.
- iv.  Used chiefly in combination with iij., but also as a signature at the end of BC. The greatest number on any one page is 28 on T t 1 b and C C 3 a.
- v. A trefoil ornament resembling a piece of border 20 cut off. Used only in BC. Two are found on O o 3 b (2) and Q q 1 b (2); four on X x 4 a (1) and Z z 3 a (1). This ornament is found on the title of the Dutch Virgilius printed by W. Vorsterman.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

P. 5. The Iron Balance. The following extract from the Historisch Onderzoek naer den oorsprong . . . der openbare plaatsen . . . van de stad Antwerpen, Antw. 1828, p. 107, throws light on this address: "Yzer Waeg. Op den hoek van de zoogenaemde Luizenmarkt, en van de Yzeren Waeg is een huis, de Yzeren Waghe, dat de stad toebehoorde." The plan by P. Verbiest shews the Luizenmarkt as a street turning out of the Steenhouwers Veste, a prolongation westward of the Lombaerde Veste; it ran almost parallel to the Cammerstraet. The Yzeren Waeg was a small open space on the eastern side some distance along, and the house so called was at the corner of this place and the Luizenmarkt.

P. 5. Inden aren van die vier evangelisten. The meaning of the word aren seems doubtful. I owe to the kindness of a friend the suggestion that it = eren, the French aire, here 'an open space,' and that the place meant was the crossways formed by an intersecting street halfway up the Lombaerde Veste, where the signs of "The Eagle" and of "S. Mark" still remain.

P. 32. Another copy of the *Dieren Palley*s was sold at the Enschedé sale in 1867 (sale catalogue, No. 890): A long description of this book is given by C. G. Hultman, Bibliographische Zeltzaamheden, 1818, 8°, pp. 7, 199.

P. 35, No. 26. Two leaves (sig. B) of an edition of the Parson in low German verse printed at Lübeck about 1500 by M. Brandiss or S. Arndes are in the British Museum [C. 18. e. 1 (45)]. They probably belong to the same edition as the Berlin fragment. There are two woodcuts, the second of which is clearly the original of No. 2 in the English edition.

P. 36, No. 29. Another copy of the Cronike van Brabant, wanting sheets D d and M M, is described by Mr. G. D. Bom in Bibliotheca Belgica, "Vlaemsche Druckers" . . . 1526 tot 1599, Amst. 1894, 4°; p. 11, No. 13.

P. 45, No. 12. A book entitled "Een wandelinghe der kersten menschen mit Jhesu den brudegam der sielen inden hof der bloemen," printed at Amsterdam 18 Dec. 1506, contains a number of cuts which are either closely copied from the Oorspronck set C, or are the originals of that set. They differ only in minute details. Cuts corresponding to Nos. 77, 89, 94, 101, 103, 106, 109, 116, 117, 119, 122, 125, 139, 227 of the Oorspronck are there found.

P. 73. Wonderful Shape. No. 109 is a mistake, and is to be struck out.

LIST OF PLATES.

- I. Types 1 and 2, being fo. 1 b of the Os facies-mentum, from the Huth copy.
- II. Device 1, and border 4, being the last page of the Fifteen Tokens, from the copy in the British Museum.
- III. A. Device 2, from the last page of Van Pape Jans landendes; taken from the copy in the British Museum.
B. Device 3^a, from the last page of the Reyse van Lissebone, 1508; taken from the copy in the British Museum.
- IV. (Frontispiece.) Device 3^a, surrounded with border 13, being the last page of the Oorspronck, 1517; from the copy in the British Museum.
- V. Title-page of the Fifteen Tokens, showing initial H, cut 1, and borders 1 [left], 2 [top and bottom], and 3 [right]. From the copy in the British Museum.
- VI. Fo. 1 b of the Fifteen Tokens; cut 2, borders 4 and 5. From the copy in the British Museum.
- VII. Title-page of Van Pape Jans landendes, from the copy in the British Museum. The original is damaged in the upper part.
- VIII. Fo. 1 b of the Letter of B. de Clereville [1511¹/₂], showing cut 2, borders 14 [top], 15 [left], and 16 [right]. From the copy in the Bodleian.
- IX. Cut 126, and border 9, from L 1 a (2) of the *Dieren Palley*s, 1520. The cut apparently belongs to a lost book on America, of which the cut and text of Plate XI. are further traces. From a copy in the British Museum.
- X. Title-page of the New Lands, showing cut 1 and borders 20 [top] and 25 [sides]. From the Grenville copy.
- XI. The two sides of fo. 2 of the New Lands, being all that concerns America. It is apparently translated from a lost Flemish original. From the Grenville copy.
- XII. The last page of the Chronike van Brabant, 1530. The cut was first used in 1497. Border 13, 13 b. From the copy in the British Museum.

[The page contains extremely faint, illegible text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side.]
